

Dream BIG!

Let's track your progress!

It's time for you to help your daughter track her progress! You guys have done the hard work of setting the goal and breaking it down into mini goals, now it's time to create a visual representation of her awesome work!

I included three sample tracking sheets in your daughter's funsheet, but please encourage her to create one of her own if she chooses. If it'll make her even more excited about her progress, go for it!

I also encouraged them to take pictures of their charts and send them to me. I'd love to see them!

Setbacks

No matter how good our intentions, sometimes things don't go quite as we planned. That's completely OK! If this happens to your daughter, remind her that it happens to everyone, and that it's best to view it as a learning opportunity.

Maybe she bit off more than she could chew as a mini goal. Maybe she can plan things a bit differently next time. Maybe she'll learn a lesson about sacrifice. So many lessons can be learned from "problems."

Above all else, make sure she doesn't think of it as a failure. You only fail when you give up, and we're not raising lazy girls!
